Reflecting Residencies is an international symposium dedicated to artist residencies. Proposed for the first time in 2020 by Arts en résidence - Réseau national and envisaged as a biennial event, it brings together the actors of residencies in France and internationally to discuss the evolution of the issues at stake for the hosting organisations, for the resident artists and for the variety of partners that these experiences are likely to bring together, concern or mobilise. By dealing with national, European and international issues, Reflecting Residencies allows for the sharing of models and the discovery of experiences during two days of thematic round-table discussions. It also includes four 'professional workshops' that provide professionals in the sector with the opportunity to develop their skills, in relation to the themes addressed.

About Reflecting Residencies #1

In 2020, the digital organisation of the event, which was initially scheduled as a live, in-person event, has enabled us to design an edition that is widely open to the world, with a multiplied audience:

The two days of exchanges and debates brought together 39 guest speakers from 8 countries.

832 spectators participants connected from 28 countries.

Four digital workshops brought together 88 professionals.

REFLECTING RESIDENCIES #2

Since 2020, art residencies have braved the successive crises that the world has been experiencing with a certain resilience. While the Covid health crisis has forced public spaces to temporarily close their doors, art residency structures have built new programmes, prepared new approaches and laid the foundations for new collaborations.

In 2022, the Reflecting Residencies #2 programme is enriched by the reflections raised by the last two years and will evolve around four main issues:

- Given that young artists have been particularly affected by the crisis, how do residencies continue to support the emerging art scene?
- Much as research laboratories, residencies are places of experimentation where artistic work processes are able to develop in an interdisciplinary manner. How do residencies establish the conditions for this experimentation?

- The European area is witnessing the development of numerous artist residencies, whose functioning differs as much as the status and remuneration practices of artists in different countries.

What professional developments are currently taking place in Europe?

- What are the prospects for art residencies developed internationally in a post-pandemic context?

An information point will offer, in parallel to the round-table discussions, an information point into the professional tools being developed or recently developed, which contribute to the professional structuring of the visual arts sector.

Lastly, this two-day of symposium at Le Carreau du Temple will be broken up by artistic interventions, feedback session and speeches by artists.

An event organised by Arts en résidence – National network

STATE OF PLAY OF THE NEW INTERNATIONAL

CHALLENGES AND LONG-DISTANCE MOBILITY

While international exchanges have been postponed and cancelled for the past two years, the resumption of mobility is eagerly awaited and necessary. The pandemic has had a negative impact on projects, but has in some cases provided a space for reflection and allowed for the preparation of new dynamics and recommendations. How do we get long-distance mobility back on track or provide solutions to crisis situations: challenges and prospects for the mobility of tomorrow. What is the new landscape and what are the current studies of national residency networks ready to open up to the world?

ARTISTIC INTERVENTIONS

2nd of June 2022 - 10.15

Conference-performance by Guillaume Aubry : Résidence

Answer: Residence (Ray-Sea-Dance)

Arts en résidence invites Guillaume Aubry to open the Reflecting Residencies symposium with a proposal conceived especially for the occasion: an inaugural opportunity to present an articulation of ideas surrounding the term residence, enriched with images, reflections, collages and extrapolations. In this short conference-performance entitled 'Résidence', the artist-researcher questions the very term 'residence': its etymology, its imagery, its occurrences, its proxemics and so on.

3rd of June 2022 - 16.00

Projection of the film of Dunking Island, 2022 (30') by Capucine Vever

A film by Capucine Vever
Vocals and composition: Wasis Diop
Music: Valentin Ferré

Dunking Island, picture of the video and acoustic device, 2022 © ADAGP, Paris / Capucine Vever

Dunking Island is an immersive video and acoustic installation lasting approximately thirty minutes that projects the audience into the heart of a drift in the North Atlantic, on the outskirts of the Gorée Island in the Bay of Dakar in Senegal.

Filmed in the ocean, the camera climbs and scours, millimetre after millimetre, the 'memory island' symbolic of the slave trade. Plunged into the heart of a 10 speaker sound composition, the audience freely wanders between six projections, juxtaposing complete and fragmented images, as they move around the installation. In a gradual descent from the surface to the seabed, from human time to marine and geological scale, Dunking Island intends to develop a poetic account while revealing the political dimension of the seabed.

Indeed, it is a question of considering the underwater world as a landscape in itself, contrary to the usual representations, and of proposing a different perspective on contemporary environmental problems that escape the time of the eye. By playing with the poetry of burial, alternating points of view and the loss of reference, Dunking Island seeks a plasticity in what is not visible.

The installation Dunking Island is presented at the art centre Image/imatge in Orthez, for the exhibition Courir à l'infini (plus loin que tous les regards) until 11th of June 2022.

With the support of the Communauté d'Agglomération Grand Paris Sud, the city of Evry-Courcouronnes, The Institut français, DICReAM - CNC, the Fondation des Artistes, the association Art of Change 2021, the city of Dakar, the Oceanium of Dakar, the art centre Kër Thioussane, the gallery Éric Mouchet, the Bel Ordinaire and the art centre Image Imatge and the collaboration of Pierre-Yves Fave and Léo Leibovici. This project is supported by Futur Antérieur Production.

CLARA DENIDET

Artist, Strasbourg (FR)

Clara Denidet's practice is as much about anthropological research as it is about empirical handiwork.

Within the coexistence of these two fields, she seeks access to individual and collective knowledge, which is expressed through language, objects and everyday practices. The research is often initiated by the confluence of a piece of land and its inhabitants. From there, texts, images, sculptures and installations emerge, which can also be tools or devices for speech, care, exchange of knowledge and stories.

MATTEO GONET

Glassmaker at Glassworks, Basel (CH)

'Glassworks' is a glass workshop dedicated to the experimentation and production of artistic projects, contemporary design objects and architectural elements. The workshop was founded in 2004 by Matteo Gonet and currently employs fifteen people.

Glassworks produces in a former aluminium factory located in the outskirts of Basel, Switzerland.

Over the years, the workshop has gained wide recognition in the art and design community, as well as in the craft trade. Glassworks nurtures an open-minded approach to complex and high stake projects. The ability to innovate, anticipate and orchestrate a production are all decisive arguments that lead designers and artists to trust the workshop with their one of a kind productions. Nearly 80% of the pieces produced here are meant for the export.

Better known for its work in blown glass technique, which is and stays the 'cœur de métier' of Matteo Gonet, the workshop has continuously widened its area of expertise to open its know-how on a larger ranging array of glass techniques. From blown glass to cast glass, from thermoforming to pâte de verre, from cutting to sandblasting and silvering. The growing requests in lighting, mixed media projects and industrial glass application led the workshop to offer new services such as expertise and overall production management as well as subcontractors sourcing and oversight.

Glassworks places the creative art practice at its core. This exchange with the clients and skilled craftsmen have been instrumental in undertaking bold experiments with a medium known for its complexity and unpredictability. This complex craft requires years of experience, a great deal of sensitivity, constant experimentation, but also daily practice. This mindset has enabled Glassworks to become a key player in a niche market.

ANNE PILLONNET

Professor at Lyon University, Institut Lumière Matière (CNRS/Lyon1) and coordinator of macSUP PhD, Lyon (FR)

Professor at Lyon University, she develops her research at the Institut Lumière Matière (CNRS/Lyon1). For many years, she has been developing relationships between the academic world and the arts, through research projects, educational programmes and mediation, in collaboration with contemporary artists, museums and associations. In particular, she co-initiated the interdisciplinary training programme macSUP, piloted by 7 higher education institutions and the Musée d'Art Contemporain de Lyon. With her research team, she studied and published a contemporary artistic protocol around blue, a structured and non-pigmentary colour of the sky. She is currently pursuing the exploration of this light matter, with the objective to respond to scientific, cultural and ecological issues.

She is a member of the European project on new advanced practices (EFAP), which promotes emerging forms of artistic and practical research. She directed the Open University until 2021, a service for the dissemination of research findings amongst the general public.

Initiated in 2017, macSUP is an academic research-creation programme piloted by a committee from the Lyon Museum of Contemporary Art and Lyon's higher education institutions, with the participation of students and academics from a wide variety of disciplines (humanities and formal). The practices of the artists chosen have very different practices which however are always open to public participation. The objective of the macSUP programme is to live the experience of creation and research, through protocols and methods that involve chance, freedom and different fields of knowledge. There is no imposed technical training or a traditional scientific or artistic outcome. It is the experimentation of the process that is the subject, it is a question of enabling exchanges between participants rather than teaching. The results of the programme are shared with the general public every year. In 2022, macSUP will be expanded internationally with its first collaboration with Montreal.

ELKE ROLOFF

In charge of the residency programme and cultural actions, NEKaTOENEa, a residency managed by the CPIE Littoral basque (Permanent Centre for Environmental Initiatives), Bayonne (FR)

Following her studies in art, Elke Roloff founded in 2007 the association 'art and project', a platform for young contemporary art. She relies on the reality and challenges of the cross border territory of the Basque Country to develop a network of artists and to carry out cultural actions. Since 2012, she has been in charge of the Nekatoenea artist residency programme and the cultural development of the CPIE Littoral Basque, at the Domaine d'Abbadia, a protected natural site in Hendaye. In a context combining nature and culture, she supports artists in residence and sets up awareness-raising events. As part of her work, she is confronted with questions regarding the cohabitation of humans and nature, the management of vulnerable spaces, biodiversity and, more broadly, art in the middle of a protected natural area.

Nekatoenea is a multifaceted place – an art residency, a space for cultural and artistic actions and awareness-raising, and a local resource centre run by the CPIE Littoral basque - an association and centre for environmental initiatives.

The association works from the protected natural site of the 'Domaine d'Abbadia' in Hendaye, property of the Conservatoire du littoral. Since its creation in 1998, the residency programme has grown, offering artists, cultural actors and the general public, a rich programme that corresponds to the missions of the CPIE LB within its area of intervention - the town of Hendaye, the Basque Country, the Pyrénées Atlantiques department, the New Aquitaine region - and beyond, with cross-border exchanges and exchanges with other European artists. Nekatoenea thus offers a diversity of artistic and cultural actions combining art, environment and science. For this reason the CPIE LB accords great importance to raising awareness of contemporary art, both through the supporting of research and artistic creation, artistic and cultural education for the general public, and by organising cultural events.

Following positions at the Art & Essai Gallery (located on the Villejean campus of Rennes 2 University), the Centre Pompidou and the Istanbul Biennale, she became the Director of Les Verrières - residency programme in Pont-Aven - a position she occupied from 2008 to 2013. Since 2013 until recently (2020), Ann Stouvenel was the Visual Arts Director of Mains d'Œuvres, a cultural space located on a former wasteland in the North of Paris.

Since 2012, she has also been the Artistic Director of residencies organised by Finis terrae - an insular art centre, based on Créac'h semaphore on the island of Ouessant, off the coast of Brest. In addition, she is the co-founder and president of Arts en résidence, federation of French residencies. She thus regularly conducts training sessions - which take place in art schools, universities, training centres and amongst elected culture representatives - on the status of an artist and the network of residencies in France.
